

HELLO! diary of the week

'Show me the money!' Cuba Gooding Jr. (here and bottom) takes the stage

Ben Stiller (here and right)

Tracy Moore

APJ founder Paul Haggis and Audrey Raffy

Natasha Koifman

PARTIES

SOUL FOOD

Hollywood actors are used to having their every whim catered to, but the tables were turned at this year's Artists for Peace and Justice gala. Helping raise $1.1 million for poverty-ravaged Haiti, Ben Stiller and Cuba Gooding Jr. were among the co-hosts who surprised guests at the Art Gallery of Ontario by waiting on tables! The fun-filled night also served a serious purpose, with rock legend Jackson Browne receiving the Peace and Justice Activism Award (following in the footsteps of Sean Penn and Susan Sarandon). "I love APJ," Jackson told Hello! "I'm completely knocked out by the work they do." Jerry Maguire star Cuba agreed. "If I can use my celebrity to help champion [this cause], then so be it."

Jackson Browne

Yannick Bisson and wife Shantelle

Suzanne Boyd