Three Canadian influencers share their can't-live-without beauty buys

Ever wonder what beauty products the style-setters rely on? So do we – and so we went straight to the source. We asked three of the country's leaders in fashion and entertainment to share their must-have picks, from lip gloss to face peels. Here, they open up their medicine cabinets and makeup bags to give us the lowdown! And with the calendar having just been wiped cleaned, there's really no time like the present to revamp your own beauty arsenal. Take a few pointers from the pros and refresh your makeup bag for 2015.

Kiehl's Powerful Wrinkle Reducing Eye Cream

"I've been using this product for the past eight years (they used to make a very similar formulation called Abyssine Eye Cream) and I always say that the caffeine in this wakes me up more than a cup of coffee."

Chanel Noir Perfume
 "It was initially the bottle I was attracted to, given my love of everything black (#allblackeverything). But after taking it home and trying it out, I discovered that the fragrance spoke to me too."

Shu Uemura Lashes

"On very special occasions, I love to go for a more glamorous look and always rely on Shu Uemura for the most natural-looking but sexy lashes. I love everything vintage – my favourite decade being the '70s – and I like to draw inspiration from that time in a lot of my makeup looks. The long lashes play into that perfectly."

Yves Saint Laurent Volupté Sheer Candy in Juicy Grapefruit
 "My friend and colleague Bunmi gave this to me as a gift two years ago, and it has been a staple in all of my handbags ever since. I love the way it feels on my lips and that it smells like candy. I never wear lip colour and this just gives the perfect tint and gloss."
